To reach the above goals and to be transparent with its customers, BONOMELLI SRL has established, applied, and is committed to improving a Food Safety Management System that, based on the main international reference standards (ISO 22000, FSSC 22000), becomes an operational tool and reference for all the production personnel.

To create, consolidate and improve the Food Safety Management System, the Executive board (Management team) undertakes to:

- make available resources necessary to pursue company' strategies/goals, and start ongoing improvement projects to allow the company to be competitive and at the forefront in the market of interest;
- develop appropriate management tools (clear company organisation, control plans, safety systems to ensure food quality and hygiene, IT systems, staff with the necessary experience and skills, effective hardware and software, etc.) to deal effectively with the food safety and legal issues of the products;
- promote efficient communication systems, both internal and external to the company, in order to guarantee that the food safety information (which may come from all levels of the BONOMELLI SRL supply chain) is available and understood by the competent managers;
- pursue customers and stakeholders' satisfaction ensuring compliance with their requests, evaluating systematically the results and anticipating expectation in relation to the market trends, technological innovation and environmental sustainability and respect;

- put in place a hygiene and health management system based on the risk assessment and control of the critical control points (by applying the HACCP method), on work instructions describing good hygiene practices (application of pre-requisite programmes), on verifications/controls (to ensure product conformity during all the phases of the production process) and on a traceability and early alarm system able to prevent/eliminate possible product hygiene and health risk;
- use efficient regulatory update systems which allow the company to keep a high level of attention to the standards of the current regulations/laws, specifically regarding hygiene and health, according to the relevant health authorities;
- encourage involvement, motivation and growth of the human resources; ensure appropriate involvement, motivation and personnel training, in order to assure continued competence, multidisciplinary training and ability to work as a team; respect collective labour agreements; pursue, in the personal relationships, behaviour aimed at respecting ethics, cultures and/or religion beliefs;
- ensure involvement and awareness of the entire supply chain to maintain and improve the finished goods safety, legality and quality of the manufactured products; pursue, in particular, a continuous improvement of the quality of the purchased products and services, through a close collaboration with the suppliers, also developing partnerships;
- ensure an increasing use of the Risk Based Thinking approach at all levels and implement a systemic evaluation and management of risks and opportunities;
